The 1929 National 4-H Camp

Announcement is made that the third national 4-H club camp will be held in Washington, D. C., June 19 to 25 inclusive, 1929.

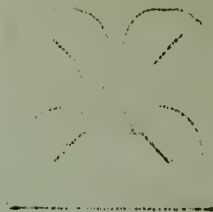

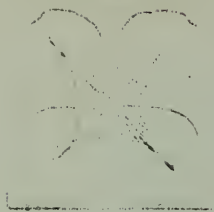

MANY 4-H CONTESTS AT NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW

Four-H club members from 26 States competed in dairy-cattle judging at the National Dairy Exposition, Memphis, Tenn., October 15 to 20, 1928. Nineteen States were represented by teams in the demonstration contest; over 200 head of calves from 13 States were shown in the competitive 4-H cattle exhibit; and representation in the 4-H showmanship contest was equally high. Oklahoma's team, consisting of Forrest K. Burns, Holland K. Williams, and Harold E. Woodson, won the judging contest and the right to represent the United States in the International Dairy Judging Contest in England in July, 1929.

Demonstrations were under two groups: (1) On breeding, growing, feeding, fitting, showing, and judging cattle; and (2) on production, consumption, and marketing of milk and milk products. The grand championship was won by Minnesota's team, consisting of Melvin Haughland and Carlton Nelson of Huston County, with a demonstration on "The production of clean milk."

Nearly 300 club members attended the exposition and enjoyed the privileges of the 4-H club building on the Tri-State Fairgrounds. Members of the executive committee of State club officials having charge of 4-H activities at the exposition were T. A. Erickson, Minnesota; G. L. Harrington, Tennessee; and E. G. Jenkins, Maryland.

Right this way for Livestock News

The 4-H school of livestock and market practices is a new event for 4-H club members of Minnesota, which was held at South St. Paul and University Farm, October 24 and 25. Only 25 members were admitted this year, but the event proved so successful that it is planned to hold the school again next year on a larger basis. T. A. Erickson, State club leader, reports that this school was designed to familiarize club members with marketing practices. The boys selected this year were outstanding livestock members, all over 18 years of age, and many of them in active farm business for themselves, although still in club work. The school opened with a tour of the stockyards and packing plants to see the various stages which livestock undergoes while going through the market process, including an exhibition, description, and comparison of market grades and classes of livestock, and commercial cuts of meat, followed by talks on the history of the open competitive market and the part it has played in the affairs of the livestock industry, and the demands of the consuming public. The morning of the second day was spent at University Farm where talks were given by staff members of the animal husbandry department on new things in feeding. In the afternoon the students saw something of the services which the livestock commission provides for the patrons; the part a dealer firm plays on the market; the history and functions of a cooperative sales agency. An explanation of the service rendered on a public market by the Bureau of Animal Industry and the service which the Packers and Stockyards Administration provides to the market and its patrons, was also given. Each speaker was asked to supply a copy of his talk and submit a few practical questions covering his subject. Those questions were used as the basis for an examination given at the close of the school. Each student was supplied with copies or extracts of all talks given, for his use in connection with talks he is expected to make on the subject of marketing practices upon his return home.

Leonard Miller of Kennard, Washington County, Nebr., has been declared the 1928 dairy calf club champion for his State. Leonard has been a dairy member for four years, belonging to a baby-beef club the preceding year. He now owns a purebred Jersey herd totaling five head. On two of his individuals that have come to milk production, Leonard's report shows that he has received $530.44 for products and spent $156.26 for feed.

Nine northern Idaho 4-H club members entered the Portland Union Stockyards pig-feeding contest. The fattened pigs were exhibited at the Pacific International Livestock Exposition.

The Ninth Annual Interstate 4-H Baby Beef and Market Pig Club Show was conducted at St. Joseph, Mo., October 2, 3, and 4. Entries were made from 27 counties of the St. Joseph territory, including 15 counties of Missouri with 168 baby beeves and 220 hogs, 6 counties of Kansas with 29 baby beeves and 34 hogs, and 6 counties of Iowa with 53 baby beeves and 22 hogs, making a total of 250 baby beeves and 276 hogs exhibited by the 4-H club members. Byron Hayes of Adams County, Iowa, won the grand championship of the show with a beautifully fitted Hereford. This was the second time that Byron scored the championship award in a major show this year, for this same steer won the premier award at the Iowa State Fair in competition with more than 550 entries. In the hog show, the champion ton litter was shown by Derrell Stevenson of Holt County, Mo. It consisted of 11 crossbred Poland-China Durocs, farrowed March 1, which weighed 3,170 pounds. The 276 hogs in the contests were sold at auction at an average of $12 per hundred. The hog sale was unique in that not a single lot sold for less than $11.10 a hundred, which was the top price paid that day on the St. Joseph market.

Tazewell County, Ill., calf-club boys took calves to market recently and brought back with them approximately $5,303.95.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

Members of the 4-H club of Randle, in Lewis County, Wash., had four tables made and placed in the Silver Creek Park this summer for picnickers. The park is widely used by people of the community for summer outings.

The Record Breakers Club of Fayette County, W. Va., had the water in all springs and wells in the community tested this year.

SWINE

Samuel F. Blaser, a club boy of Emmett, Idaho, has just completed the raising of a ton-litter of 14 hogs which in 180 days weighed 4,156 pounds. The pigs were registered Durocs, and during an early period of the contest he fed two of the individuals on the bottle. W. D. Kinder, district extension agent, says that this is one of the biggest and best litters ever produced in the West. Samuel has been growing ton-litters for the last three years. Last year he won second place in the ton-litter contest and this year he won first place. The hogs were shown at the Boise Grange Fair, October 9 to 12, winning first in the ton-litter contest, first and second in individual fat hogs, and first in pen of four fat hogs.

Elston Dyson, a 4-H pig club member of Alexandria, La., by producing 2,871 pounds of pork with 11 pigs in 160 days, has been named winner of the State ton litter contest and will receive the prize of $200 awarded by the Louisiana State Fair Association. Under the rules of the contest, young Dyson will be permitted to feed his hogs until they are 180 days of age. This will be done in an effort to break the State record of 3,009 pounds now held by Carl Keller of East Baton Parish.

Gilbert Batt, of Worth County, Mo., has a spotted Poland China sow that has raised a total of 48 pigs in five litters. Four of the five litters were made to weigh a ton or more in 180 days. Gilbert's ton litter won second in the 1927 Interstate 4-H Baby Beef and Market Pig Club Show at St. Joseph, Mo., and first in the 1926 show. This year he won the championship on individual barrows on a pig from his ton litter. In 1926 he also won the same honor on a pig produced by the same sow.

A sale at auction of 60 boars of eight different breeds which were raised by the Eden Headliner Sow Litter 4-H Club of Eden Township was held at Hudson, S. Dak., October 20. All of the boars were eligible to registry and cholera immune, and most of them were ribbon winners at the Lincoln County and South Dakota State Fairs.

Local Leaders' Page

Clallam County, Wash., held its first 4-H club leaders' camp this summer, with 25 in attendance. They camped for two days at Klahanne Gardens on Lake Crescent. The gardens were originally used for a sanitarium but have been placed in trust for the boys and girls of the county. It includes a large pavilion with a fireplace, a screened-in porch, and several cabins. Cots and mattresses are provided, and there is a well-equipped kitchen and storeroom. The camp menu was planned by the leader of the 4-H club council and the home demonstration agent. The women divided into three groups to take care of camp activities, such as getting meals, washing dishes, and caring for camp.

Local club leaders of Charles Mix County, S. Dak., sponsored a picnic in honor of 4-H club members, on Oct. 8. At this event, cups and medals were awarded to the winners in numerous events conducted at the county and State fairs.

Lorenzo F. Kinney, Jr., State club leader, reports that each club in Rhode Island is expected to have an assistant leader who may be an adult or an older 4-H club member. The duties of the assistant leader are to assist the leader with the details of carrying on the club, helping in the preparation for demonstrations, etc., and acting as leader when the leader can not be present.

A new three-year program of leadership training has been planned in New Hampshire by a State committee composed of three county club agents and the State club leader. The plan calls for three meetings of leaders during the year on general leadership topics and one on subject-matter training. In addition, there will be the annual State training course for local leaders held at the University of New Hampshire during the State 4-H Camp.

A special conference for leader training was held at the University of Vermont, October 8, 9, and 10. This conference was especially for State and county club agents. Mary L. Sanborn, assistant State club leader in New Hampshire, was the special guest and speaker upon the program.

A series of leaders' conferences for local leaders of girls' clubs is being conducted at the present time in 12 counties in South Dakota. These conferences include a discussion of subject-matter material, organization methods, and reporting. The leaders will also be given suggestions on how to maintain the interest of the club members.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a review of the literature on the topic.

C

Erna Riedel, whom many will remember as one of the delegates from Maryland at the second national club camp, has shown the stuff of which club girls are made. Returning home from camp, she found that unfortunate circumstances had thrown the entire responsibility of the farm work on her. Among other duties, this necessitated taking to Baltimore three hogsheads of tobacco, which were opened and sold for $1,062. She says that it generally takes a farmer two or three weeks to have his tobacco opened and sold but as she was the first girl to bring tobacco to Baltimore markets, the inspectors opened and sold the same day for her.

Three hundred and twelve girls from 68 counties, with their 21 chaperons, were housed at the encampment building on the fairgrounds, Dallas, Tex., October 16 to 18, as guests of the State fair association. In order to have won this trip, each girl must have been an outstanding club girl in her own county and must have sent an exhibit to the fair of three entries of her canning, sewing, or home improvement and her complete record book and history. During the three days the girls served as hostesses to the many special guests who called at the camp.

A felt hat in 20 minutes doesn't hardly sound reasonable, but that is exactly what two Indiana girls did in their demonstration, "Making a Felt Hat." Frances Crooks and Pauline Collings of Parke County are the hat wizards and they won first place among the thirteen county teams competing in the home-economics demonstration team contest and the championship in competition with the boys' winning team, at the Indiana State 4-H Club Round-up.

Iowa Center 4-H Club, of Goshen County, Wyo., has bought a sewing machine for the exclusive use of the club. The girls obtained money for this purpose by putting on an entertainment, and an ice cream supper.

ALL ABOUT GIRLS (Continued)

Esther Sundell, local club leader of New Era, Oceana County, Mich., had one of the most outstanding girls' clubs in the State last year. Miss Sundell's eight girls were taking the third consecutive year's clothing work under her leadership, and every girl wanted to have some part in the various contests offered to club girls. As a result seven of the eight girls won some county honors through clothing judging, demonstrations, style and health contests, and one of the girls won the county championship in her third year project. The seven girls then competed for honors in the southern Michigan contests. Helen Norberg and Nina Hasselsweet placed first and second in the style show. Ellen Pastema and Edna Adema were the second place clothing judging team while Jennie Mickstra and Elaine Vandema placed first in the clothing demonstration contests. The seventh girl, Verna Norberg, who had been the county champion, won second honors in the State for the third year clothing project. Six of these girls through their winnings received trips to the Michigan State Fair at Detroit. Verna Norberg was also one of the 10 members chosen for the 1928 Michigan State 4-H Service Club, for her contribution to club work in her community.

Flora Graves, a 4-H club member of Caddo, La., by making a profit of $240.43 on one-half acre of cabbage, won first prize in the State cabbage contest, this year.

Melba Jackson, a club member from Columbus, Burlington County, N. J., furnished a surprise in the junior dairy show at the Trenton Interstate Fair by defeating about 100 boys to win first place in showmanship. Miss Jackson and Martha Washington Waldorf Radium, a Holstein cow, made up the combination in the show ring which the boys, with their animals, were unable to match.

An average home kitchen with a group of club girls giving a canning demonstration was the theme of a 4-H club girl float at the convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Fort Worth.

Marie Carpenter, a Washington club girl of Skamania County, leads a busy life milking 30 goats morning and evening. They are of a good strain, and her accounts show that she is making this a paying project. She exhibited some of her stock and milk products at the fair.

Club girls of Roanoke County, Va., who had been studying the judging of garments, made up and put on a demonstration at a 4-H community club meeting without the help of their home demonstration agent so successfully that a teacher reported: "It was wonderful the way the club members put the demonstration across. Only 4-H club members could do this."

One hundred and seven Massachusetts girls competed in the county and State school-dress contests held during this year. The average cost of these dresses was $1.60. They were judged both on and off their owners for style, fit, becomingness, workmanship, suitability, cost, and selection of accessories. The final contest was held at Camp Gilbert and the State champion chosen. She is Violet Tupper, a club member for nine years and a local leader for four years. The object of the contest, writes Marion E. Forbes, assistant State club leader, was to raise the standard of clothing club work.

Mamie Ziegler is a Washington 4-H garden club girl with a record. She marketed more than 100 crates of strawberries this year from one-fourth acre and did not hire any help outside of the family in doing it. She received $1.25 per crate for the berries.

Sing a song of marmalade
Johnny's in the jam,
Susie wants some fruit preserves
'Cause candy's now been banned;
Come and see Miss Brewer
Learn the newest ways
Make 'em now when fruit is ripe
For coming winter days.

Thus sings a New York bard of the State food specialist, Miss Lucille Brewer, who has recently been up in New Hampshire giving the 4-H club girls there some hints on refreshments for their fall parties.

Those attending the Kansas State Fair encampment at Hutchinson were served meals of 4-H quality by the Andale 4-H club of Sedgwick County. About 150 attended the encampment and kept the girls pretty busy for a few days.

FOUR-H HENS' EGG RACE

The 105 hens in the second 4-H egg-laying contest of South Carolina, which closed September 30 went 3,722 eggs higher in records than the same number of hens last year in the first contest. It was held at Rock Hill, S. C., by the South Carolina Extension Service in cooperation with Winthrop College.

Average egg production in this contest was 116.5 eggs per hen as compared to 100 eggs per hen in the first contest. Ten individual hens this year laid more than 200 eggs against one hen last year. Thirteen hens each produced between 180 and 200 eggs as compared to six hens in the first contest. Total production this year was 13,161 eggs against 9,439 eggs last year.

On November 1, 1927, the contest opened with 21 pens of seven different varieties of breeds from various sections of the State. Each pen consisted of five regular contesting pullets and one alternate held in reserve in case of death or serious disability of one of the other pullets. At the close of the contest all pens were still in the race.

The results as a whole this year have been very gratifying, and the contest has demonstrated very forcibly that the average flock on the farm in South Carolina will more than triple the State average of 33.8 eggs per hen if properly fed, housed, and managed. Contestants are urged to use for breeding purposes each hen that produced more than 135 eggs in order to begin breeding for higher egg production in his or her flock.

Highest pen in the contest was of White Leghorns belonging to Nellie Grant, Rural Delivery, Rock Hill, S. C. The five hens in this pen laid in 11 months, 1,078 eggs, and are now being held over at the contest quarters to finish out their full year.

Highest individual hen in the contest was a Rhode Island Red owned by Marguerite McCown, R. F. D., Anderson, S. C. This hen has an 11 months' record of 250 eggs and is being kept to finish the year.

The 4-H egg-laying demonstration is being made possible by Dr. D. E. Johnson, President of Winthrop College, who provides the houses and means for conducting the contest. Miss Juanita Neely, extension poultry specialist, has supervision of the contest, while the superintendent of the Winthrop poultry plant has direct charge of the management. The contest runs 11 months and is open only to 4-H club members of South Carolina. As far as records show, it is the only contest of its kind in the United States.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Phi Upsilon Omicron, honorary home-economics sorority at University of Wisconsin, offered three scholarships for freshman 4-H club girls attending the university. The awards have been made, based on essays written by the girls and on recommendations by local people.

This year's winners of the three scholarships offered each year by the Texas Home Demonstration Association and the State fair association to Texas 4-H club girls have made from their club work during their membership a total net profit of $3,141, or about a thousand dollars each.

William A. Crego of Baldwinsville, Onondaga County, and Gordon Cairns, of South Kortright, Delaware County, N. Y., have been awarded Cornell winter course scholarships of $50 each by the Grange League Federation for outstanding club work.

Miscellany

Two thousand eight hundred eighty-seven 4-H boys attended the 43 county camps held in Alabama in July and August.

D. P. Murray, State boys' and girls' club specialist, Utah, reports that he has 3,500 enrolled in club work throughout the State, and that 308 local leaders have devoted their time to the cause during the past year.

A. B. Bingham, assistant State club leader, states that Clearfield County, Pa., has the most diversified club program in the State. A total of 175 boys and girls this year were engaged in eight lines of work. There are 100 in potato clubs, 8 in a pig-breeding club, 12 in two dairy-calf clubs, 10 in a junior cow club, 15 in a capon club, 15 in a raspberry club, 10 in a sheep club, and 5 in a bee club.

The sixth annual Virginia negro State short course of 4-H clubs was held at Hampton Institute, August 7 to 11. One hundred and thirty-eight boys, 86 girls, 11 local leaders, and 25 farm and home demonstration agents, representing 26 counties, were in attendance.

CHIEF EXECUTIVES AND 4-H CLUBS

Vermont started this tale by wanting to know if any other State had a governor who had appeared at so many 4-H club events in one year as Gov. John E. Weeks, who attended the Washington County Council and Round-up at Montpelier, in March; the State 4-H Club Week for members and leaders, at Burlington, in July; Addison County (his county) Round-up, in October. He also gave a 10-minute talk on 4-H club work at the fourteenth Annual Vermont Conference of Social Work.

Your CLUB LEADER is not prepared to state the number of times other governors have taken part in club events this year, but ample evidence was found from Wyoming, Maine, Tennessee, and Iowa, that the governors of these States are ardent advocates of club work.

The signature of Gov. Frank C. Emerson, of Wyoming, appears on certificates of honor which are awarded to clubs in that State completing their club work 100 per cent.

Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Maine dined at the model home exhibit at Eastern States Exposition as a guest of Maine club members. The dinner was prepared and served by Maine club girls.

Gov. Henry H. Horton of Tennessee will head the list of speakers at the Middle Tennessee Club Congress, on November 13. He also spoke at the same Congress last year.

Gov. John Hammill of Iowa is to deliver the principal address of the evening at a 4-H banquet at Sigourney, Iowa, on November 15, in honor of Evelyn Kirkpatrick, of Keokuk County, who is Iowa's 1928 health champion.

AND, as if to clinch the evidence that outstanding men are devotees of club work, the "4-H Clubgram of Carlton County," Minnesota, submits on its first page a printed sheet headed by a photograph of President Coolidge and a calf-club delegation from Carlton County.

So that's that, Vermont!

Club members in Louisiana are giving three 'Rahs for President T. W. Atkinson, of the State University, who appropriated $6,000 to assist in building 12 permanent 4-H camps in the State.

FIRST.

Windham County has the distinction of holding the first 4-H club camp in Connecticut. The encampment was held at the county Y.M.C.A. Camp - Camp Woodstock. The enrollment in this first camp was 33. Plans for next year's camp in Windham County are already under way because of the excellent results brought about through the encampment.

Arkansas held its first State dairy club show this year in connection with the State fair. Fifty-four registered 4-H dairy calves were shown. Fifteen of these calves were shown at the National Dairy Show and won $285. And this was Arkansas' first time at the National!

Two Shoshone Indian boys from the Owyhee Reservation in northern Elko County, Nev., won the State 4-H potato-judging contest this year. They are Patsy Whiterock and Carl Dick, 13-year-olds, said to be the first Indian children to attend a 4-H club camp in Nevada. The potato-judging contest was held in connection with the Nevada Junior Farm Bureau Camp, in August.

The profits from the 4-H lunch counter at Camp Field, which is held in connection with the Brockton Fair, Plymouth County, Mass., are to be used as scholarship loans for 4-H club members. For four years these profits have been saved. The lunch counter has become one of the most popular eating places at Brockton Fair because of the quality products and high standards evident at the counter. There has been accumulated now almost $1,500 to be loaned at small interest rates to 4-H club members who are studying agriculture or home economics and are in good standing at college and in need of financial assistance.

News

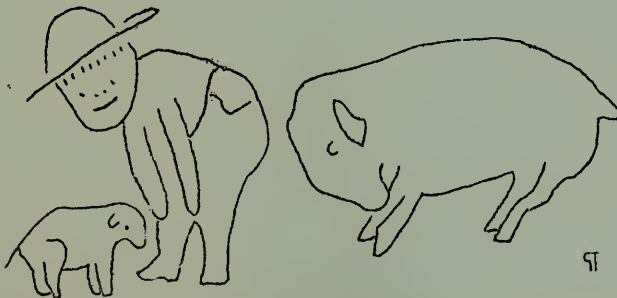

Barbour County was the first county in West Virginia to report on the news writing project which was begun this year under the direction of W. C. Schnopp, agricultural editor. One of the outstanding individual achievements in the project for the county was made by Ruth Moore, of the Battlers' Club, Philippi, W. Va. Miss Moore served as a regular reporter from her town for The Clarksburg Telegram, which paid her 10 cents per column inch for the news. She earned $48 during the summer months by writing news, besides gaining valuable experience and rendering a real service to her community. Angela Campbell, of the Work Together Club, Kasson, W. Va., specializes in writing fairy stories for the Cincinnati Times Star, and she won a first prize in a contest for stories of this type. Edna Cole, of the Prize Winners' Club, Pleasant Creek, W. Va., and Paul Phillips, of the Hop-to-It Club, Belington, confined their activities to reporting community events, and sports and athletic events, respectively. The news writing work of these and other club members taking the project was exhibited at the county fair.

The Oconto County Reporter, Oconto, Wis., published a special section in the September 27, 1928, edition, with a view to arousing county-wide interest in 4-H club work. Photographs, stories about the club work of counties to the north and to the south of Oconto County by the county agents in those counties, and an article by J. I. Etheridge, county agent for Oconto County, explaining the plan for club work to be undertaken there, were features of the section.

A Boost for 4-H BY WALLACE McLEOD

"Gallatin County 4-H News," Montana, runs a Poet's Corner, with material supplied by 4-H club members of the county. The members also seem to have poetic license to make sketches to accompany their efforts, as witness sample herewith. Wallace belongs to the Crimpy Fleece Sheep Club.

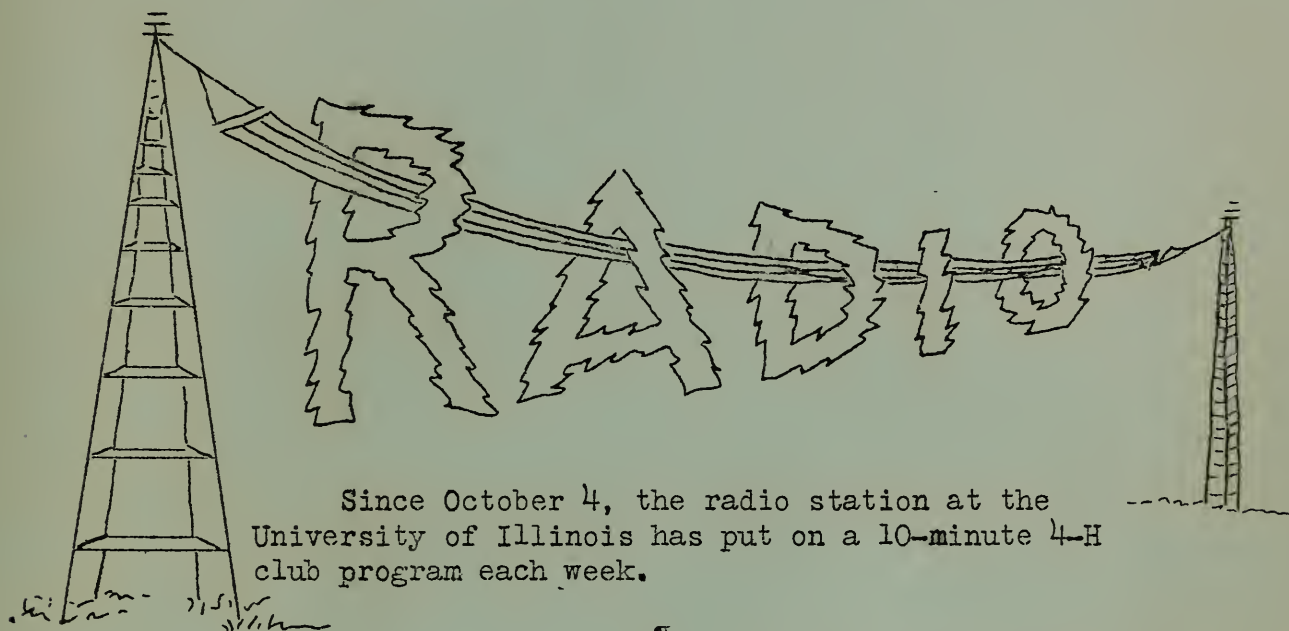

"The Stem Winder," Nebraska Boys' and Girls' Club Pep Sheet, reports that there were 501 baby beeves exhibited and 472 sold at the State fair. They averaged 925 pounds, dressing 61 per cent, selling for an average of $159.09 per head, above the marketing cost, for a total of $75,090. So far as Nebraska is able to learn, this is the largest sale of 4-H baby beeves at one time and one place. The grand champion, fed by Frederick Rottler of Madison County, dressed 67 per cent. The reserve grand champion, owned by Louis Harris of Butler County, dressed 66.1 per cent.

There will be broadcasted over WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., on November 29, from 7.30 to 8.00 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, a 4-H "Home Night" radio program. The purpose of this program is to emphasize the importance of the home in 4-H club work; provide a time for parents and children to gather to discuss problems of their 4-H club work and plan future 4-H work, educational and vocational activities; and listen to a program designed to furnish the setting for such family council.

AMONG OURSELVES

Since July 1, South Dakota has added three district club agents to the staff. They are J. W. Howe, with headquarters at Mitchell; Louis Thompson, with headquarters at Faulkton; and D. E. Cass, whose district will be in the eastern part of the State. South Dakota also has several new home demonstration agents. Sara Dewing has charge of Beadle, Hand, and Spink Counties, with headquarters at Huron; Hilda Laabs has charge of Clay, Union, and Yankton Counties, with headquarters at Yankton; Ann Dunlap has charge of Lincoln, Turner, and Minnehaha Counties with headquarters at Sioux Falls; Margaret Conklin has charge of Sully, Hughes, and Stanley Counties with headquarters at Pierre; Anna Kaiser has charge of Douglas, Hutchinson, and Bon Homme Counties with headquarters at Tyndall; Georgia Rae Easter has charge of Lake, Miner, and McCook Counties with headquarters at Madison; Anna Dempster will have charge of Clark, Codington, and Grant Counties with headquarters at Watertown; and Sylvia Newell will have charge of Faulk, Potter, and Walworth Counties with headquarters at Gettysburg.

A. R. Schubert, new county agricultural agent for Emmet County, Mich., is a former 4-H club boy. Mr. Schubert recently married Miss Ruth Featherly, assistant State club leader, and she too was a former club member.

Harold J. Foster, newly appointed county agricultural agent for Newaygo County, Mich., is also a former club boy from Rives Junction, Jackson County, Mich.

Louise McGill, a former Washington County, Ohio, 4-H club member and leader, recently entered the extension field as home agent in Hickman and Carlisle Counties, Kentucky. Two other former club members of this county are teaching vocational agriculture and one is teaching vocational home economics.

G. W. Ackerman, extension service photographer, recently spent a week in Connecticut with State Club Leader A. J. Brundage, taking club pictures. The CLUB LEADER has half a mind to throw down a gauntlet challenging anybody to claim association with anyone who has made as many 4-H club photographs as G. W. He has 3,909 club pictures to his credit, to obtain which he visited 28 States.
